Attracting investment for a sustainable energy transition and the role of international financial organizations

Date: December 2, 2023

Organizers: AIFC, IGTIC, MENR

Location: Central Asia Pavilion, COP28.

Today, at the global level, there is a large-scale task of decarbonization and diversification of the energy sector, aimed at solving acute problems associated with providing the population with affordable energy resources and reducing the anthropogenic impact on the environment.

At the same time, the sustainable and transit finance market promotes a sustainable energy transition by providing funds for projects that help reduce negative environmental impacts and create the conditions for cleaner and more sustainable energy.

Discussions on attracting investment in projects related to the energy transition will help identify best practices and opportunities for attracting investment in sustainable energy and enhancing the role of international financial institutions in achieving sustainable development goals and reducing environmental impact.
